Background

Anele Mbisha, known to his fans as Saudi, was born and bred in one of Soweto's townships, Senaone. Growing up in a family that loved music and had a large collection of records. The likes of Brenda Fassie, Michael Jackson and Nina Simone inspired him to pursue music as a career. The 21yr old recorded his first song on an electronic keyboard at the tender age of 13.

Music Background

As Saudi's musical skills developed, he created a fresh and unique sound in the efforts to define his style of music, naming it "Japan Four". This sound is a mixture of R&B, Trap music and alternative Afro sounds. It's the fusion of these unconventional musical elements and contemporary sounds and the edition of ad-libs to the rhythm that compliment and complete beats.

It was in 2011 during his high school years, when Saudi officially took a step and joined forces with other young rappers. The crew was known as "O.V.L.O.E", an acronym for Ozmuzik Victory Lane Over Everything. The collective assisted in building his skill as a rapper and beat maker.

Saudi | Biography | Ambitiouz Entertainment

He later joined forces with Ambitiouz Entertainment and proved his talent by adding hooks to some of the greatest hits from the record label such as "Washa" by Dj Citi Lyts, "Couldn't" by A reece, "Dreams" and "pray for me" by Emtee.

He also featured on the hit single "Ameni" by Miss Pru, which also features Emtee, Fifi Cooper, B3nchmark, A reece, Sjava and Saudi. Saudi's released his debut single under Ambitiouz Entertainment - "There she go" was released on the 15th of April on free download. There she goes" features the boy doing things "A-Reece".

The creative genius has created a mellow and soulful rendition inspired by lack of loyalty in relationships. With over online downloads and 202 033 YouTube views currently, - Saudi is proving that being different and trusting ones art can lead to massive success.

"I am grateful and humbled by this opportunity to make music and live my dream. I'm inspired to work harder and create more great music"
